1032 Dutch Medal—Ob. a Female, representing the United Provinces; in the back-ground the destruction of Ships of War near Chatham, "Mitis et Fortis," in the exergue, "Procul Hinc Mala Bestia Regnis." Reverse, another personification of the Republic, with a Cornucopiæ, &c.; Merchantmen in the distance, sailing undisturbed, "Irato Bellum, Placato Numine Pax Est." Struck on the peace concluded at Breda, soon after the capture of Sheerness, and the destruction of several Ships of War in the Medway, by a Squadron detached by De Ruyter, then at the mouth of the Thames. This medal gave great offence to the English Court—the attention of Charles II. was directed to it, and an endeavour was made to persuade him that the words "Mala Bestia" alluded to himself. The States General upon coming to a knowledge of this circumstance caused a representation to be made to the English Ambassador (Sir William Temple) of their surprise and regret—that what was intended merely to allude to war, envy, and discord, had been maliciously interpreted as a personal insult to his Majesty; they also caused the dies to be destroyed, and 1000 ducats to be paid to the engraver as a compensation. It is accurately engraved in Van Loon's Histoire Metallique des Pais Bas, tom. 2, p. 534, No. 1. highly preserved and extra rare . 1

1036 —— Another of the same illustrious Hero, upon his death in combat against the French. This brave man—after serving his country fifty-eight years, and signalizing himself in the tremendous combats that occurred between the Fleets of England and Holland—after having in one instance terrified London itself, by detaching, as before stated, a squadron of his fleet up the Medway, which captured Sheerness, Upnor Castle, and burnt several English sail of the line—was mortally wounded in a comparatively unimportant engagement off the coast of Sicily, in 1676. Among the various honours decreed by his country to his memory was the medal here treated of; an accurate engraving of which will be found in Van Loon, tom. 3, p. 176. In beautiful preservation and rare . . . 1
